About Me

I'm finishing up my last year of college, studying web development. I have learned a lot about designing websites and programming during my education and internships. I'm very dedicated and good at understanding how websites should look and work. I pay a lot of attention to how things look and make sure they are easy for people to use. I can also work on the technical stuff behind the scenes that makes websites function well. In short, I'm a web developer who makes websites that look good and are easy to use. Whether it's a big project with a lot of people or something smaller, I can handle it.
